Finding the right support for your Indigenous-owned business

From financing to expert advice and everything in between, there's a lot that government can do for Canadian businesses – but with so many options available, it's easy to miss out if you don't know where to look.

The Business Benefits Finder is a great place to start.

The Finder is a free all-in-one, tool that can help you narrow down your search and find the support you need to start and grow your business. By answering a few quick questions about your business, you'll receive a tailored list of programs and services that reflect your unique business needs and entrepreneurial journey.

PRO TIP: If you're looking for support geared specifically to Indigenous-owned businesses, you can filter your results in two easy steps:

- Under “we are looking for programs that support”, select “Indigenous Peoples”
- After that, you'll be able to specify if you are First Nations, Inuit, or Métis. Disclosure is completely optional and selecting these options won't exclude you from any programs – rather, it will let you know of any additional programs you may be eligible for.
