PROGRESSIVE ABORIGINAL RELATIONS (PAR) GUIDE

The Guide Consists of Three Sections

- Section One: Introduction to the PAR Program
- Section Two: Moving Forward with PAR Committed Criteria
- Section Three: Moving Forward with PAR Certification Criteria

The Purpose of the Guide

To give:

- An introduction to the Progressive Aboriginal Relations program (from CCAB).
- Guidance on how to get involved with the PAR program through to applying for CCAB recognition.
- An overview of PAR Criteria and selection tips (to help with implementation, there are two Criteria sets available).
- An overview of the PAR submission adjudication system.
- An appreciation of what outcomes can be expected from implementation of PAR Criteria.

The Canadian Council for Aboriginal Business (CCAB)

Since 1984, this national non-profit organization has adapted to the changing needs of stakeholders in Aboriginal Business. The Canadian Council for Aboriginal Business (CCAB) is non-partisan and receives no core government funding — it is supported through corporate funding, program and event sponsorships, and membership dues. Here's what CCAB does:

- Helps facilitate sustainable relations between the Canadian business sector and First Nation, Inuit, and Métis people;
- Conducts relevant research that captures trends, best practices, and areas of opportunity for Aboriginal people and business; and
- Works with both Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal businesses to encourage economic sustainability, training and skill development, and recognition of Aboriginal business success.

- PAR Working Group - Internal cross-functional group/committee (people involved in Aboriginal employment, business development, and community relationship matters), to give support to the PAR process and focus on planning and implementation of the company's Aboriginal relations strategy.
- Self-Assessment - Completing an internal assessment of current state against PAR Criteria, with input from across the company (focus groups), and from the Aboriginal community.
- Site Visit Exercise - One-day site visits are made to PAR Certification Criteria applicants (only), with the aim of verifying selected points from the submission noted by the PAR Verifier during the submission review.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PAR PROGRAM

What is PAR?

Progressive Aboriginal RELATIONS

Canadian Council for Aboriginal Business

PAR is a recognition and certification program that confirms organizational performance on Aboriginal relations and signals to the Aboriginal community that these organizations are good business partners, good places to work, and are committed to prosperity for Aboriginal communities.

The PAR logo provides a high level of assurance to communities because the designation is supported by an independent third-party verification. Since the program's introduction in 2001, many of Canada's leading companies have achieved PAR certification at the bronze, silver or gold level. PAR consists of two sets of Criteria (Committed and Certification, both outlined in this Guide), designed specifically to assist companies that are at different levels of implementation to successfully move forward and sustain their focus on Aboriginal relations, with good outcomes.

Key Subjects that Drive PAR Criteria

Four key Drivers are interwoven through the PAR Committed Criteria and as separate categories in the PAR Certification Criteria. These are:

Leadership Actions

Leadership Actions are defined as actions to reinforce an organizational focus on Aboriginal relations by leaders of the organization. Such actions have an impact in achieving and sustaining good results in all PAR Drivers. These actions include setting and cascading a clear commitment and policy, identification and communication of the Community of Interest, scheduling self-assessment exercises against PAR Criteria to review status, and the application of a structure to drive and help sustain the commitment to positive Aboriginal relations across the organization

Employment

Employment is defined as the commitment of resources (time and money) to achieving equitable representation of Aboriginal persons in the workplace. This involves recruiting and retaining Aboriginal talent, supporting their career development and advancement, and promoting mobility of Aboriginal employees throughout employment sectors and levels. This Driver also includes supporting cross-cultural awareness and/or cultural sensitivity training, and providing training and support for existing or prospective Aboriginal employees through specific programs or actions.

Business Development

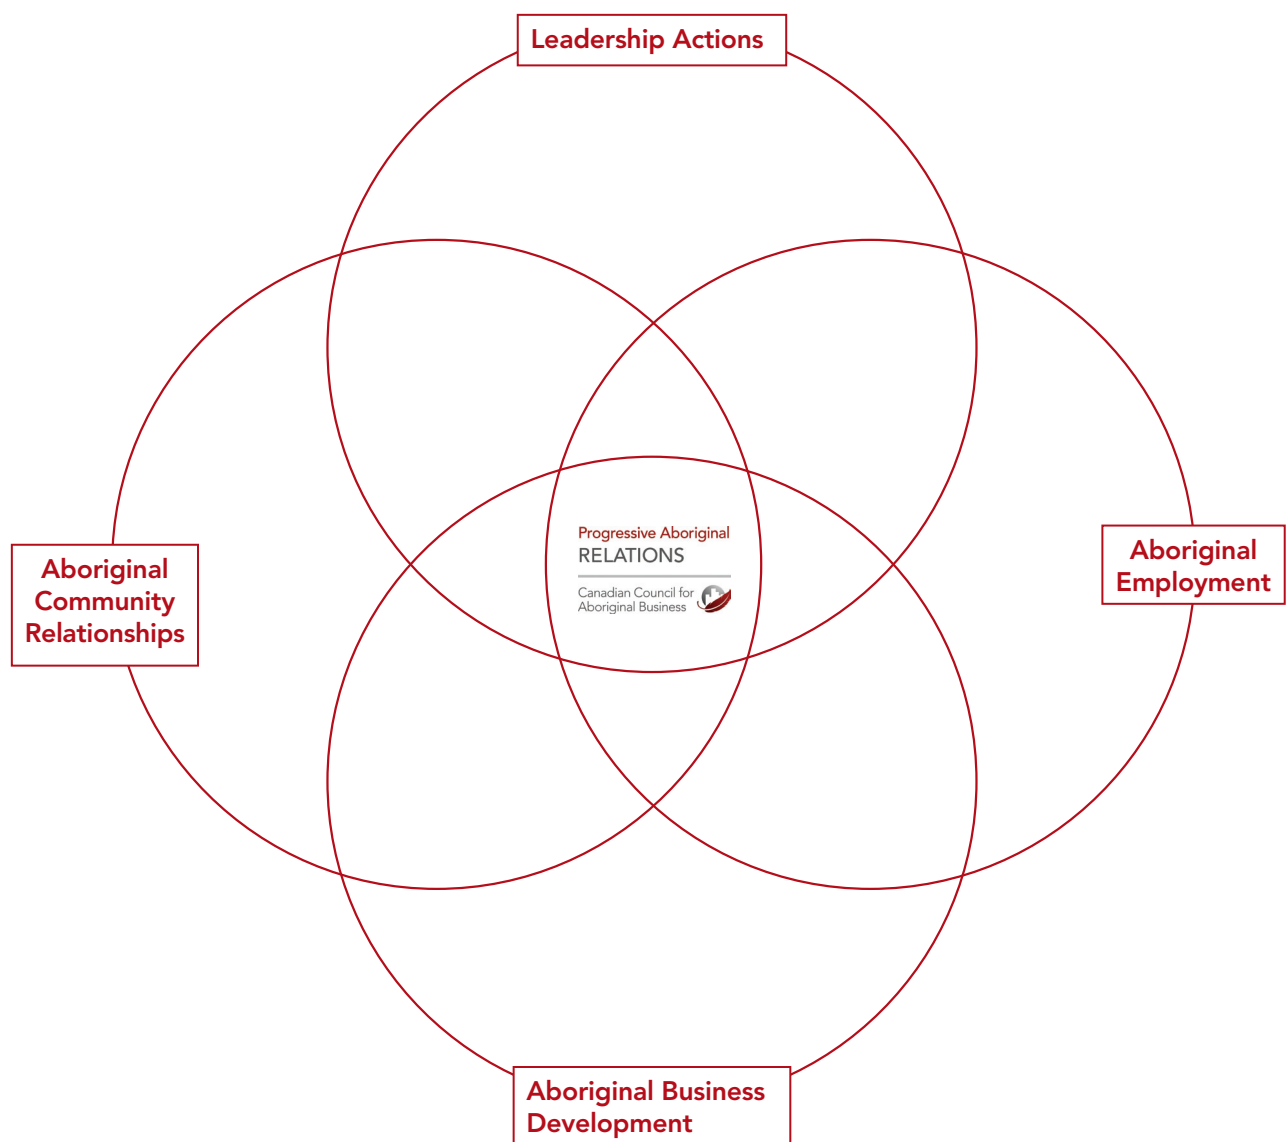

Business development is defined as the commitment of resources (time and money) to the development of business relationships with Aboriginal-owned businesses. These activities are sustained through mutual benefit. Capacity building and mentorship also directly relate to sustaining, enhancing or developing future business development.

Community Relationships

The Community Relationships Driver is broken out into two components: engagement and support. Engagement is defined as providing time and resources to develop and sustain positive and progressive relationships with Aboriginal communities, groups and stakeholders. Engagement can include communications, information sharing, involvement in events and activities, and partnerships. Support is defined as a commitment to develop positive and progressive relationships with Aboriginal communities, groups and stakeholders by providing financial and/or in-kind support. These components work together to nurture and sustain positive and progressive relationships. Those companies that are viewed as part of the community have a far better chance of success in sustaining good relationships, versus those that go into the community to give an occasional presentation.

SECTION ONE

PAR JOURNEY DIAGRAM

SELECTING PAR CRITERIA

Once your company has decided to participate in PAR, you will need to select the desired PAR Criteria best suited to current state, either the PAR Committed Criteria or the PAR Certification Criteria; copies of PAR Criteria are available from CCAB.

PAR Committed Criteria

The PAR Committed Criteria is a progressive and phased process, developed from questions selected from the full PAR Certification Criteria, to assist a company just starting out in PAR. A company's involvement in PAR indicates its commitment to the continuous improvement of Aboriginal relations, and intention to undergo external verification of its performance in the future. The PAR Committed Criteria is comprehensive but user friendly with three specific progressive phases, emphasizing self-assessment/gap analysis, and annual feedback to assist companies in setting a stable foundation for positive Aboriginal relations, and for making a future submission for CCAB PAR Certification. Each phase of the PAR Committed Criteria should take no longer than one year to implement (all phases should be completed within three years). Following successful completion of Phase Three of the PAR Committed Criteria, a company submits a PAR submission at the PAR Certification Criteria level. (For additional comments covering PAR Committed Criteria expected outcomes, see "Commentary on PAR Committed Criteria" within Section 2 of the Guide).

PAR Certification Criteria

The PAR Certification Criteria was designed for organizations at the Third Phase PAR Committed Criteria implementation level or above, to help grow and sustain their focus on positive Aboriginal relations. This level of participation offers companies the opportunity to provide the highest level of assurance to their stakeholders that they are invested in a strong commitment to Aboriginal relations. Unlike the PAR Committed Criteria, which is a three-phase progressive format, the PAR Certification Criteria is one set of questions and is made up of four comprehensive sections covering each PAR Driver (Leadership Actions, Employment, Business Development and Community Relationships). In addition to the standard PAR submission review process, adjudication for PAR Certification Criteria includes a scheduled and detailed on-site verification exercise (on-site discussions with company personnel as well as interviews with external Aboriginal stakeholders). These inputs combine to create a PAR Submission Review that is used by the PAR Jury to assist their deliberations in regards to awarding the company PAR standing at the Bronze, Silver or Gold level. (For additional comments covering PAR Certification Criteria expected outcomes, see "Commentary on PAR Certification Criteria" within Section 3 of the Guide).

15-Point Aboriginal Relations Questionnaire

In deciding on which Criteria best suits your company, it is suggested you, along with a few colleagues, complete The 15-Point Aboriginal Relations Questionnaire. This will help generate some productive dialogue on how the company is currently doing on Aboriginal relations, and help your team decide on the right PAR Criteria for the company. If you answered Yes to less than 12 questions, check out the PAR Committed Criteria, which will help you prepare for future application of the PAR Certification Criteria. If you answer Yes to 12 questions or more, then you may be ready to work now with the PAR Certification Criteria.

	Yes	No
1. Are we serious about supporting Aboriginal relations, for example do we have an Aboriginal Relations Policy in place, and does everyone understand it?
2. Do we have a solid strategy on Aboriginal relations, and are we all committed to it?
3. Do we have an Aboriginal Relations Committee that leads the charge on implementing our Aboriginal relations strategy across the company?
4. Do we have a good training module covering Aboriginal culture, and has everyone gone through it?
5. Have we done a gap-analysis against a comprehensive Aboriginal relations criteria, helping us identify our current status (and opportunities for improvement)?
6. Do we use a database to help us source Aboriginal businesses as suppliers?
7. Do we have good procedures in place to ensure that Aboriginal suppliers have good access to our business?
8. Do we transfer our knowledge and skills to the Aboriginal community, for example by supporting and getting involved in programs such as core competency/readiness and leadership training?
9. Do we mentor Aboriginal business people, and support community training and education initiatives to help the development of Aboriginal businesses?
10. Do we have specific goals on increasing Aboriginal employment, retention, spending on goods/services from Aboriginal businesses, and on giving financial and/or in-kind support for Aboriginal community events and programs?
11. Do we have an Action Plan that identifies our actions, responsibilities and timelines for meeting any goals on Aboriginal relations?
12. Do we track our performance against our goals, using performance indicators and analysis with scheduled reviews?
13. Do we encourage and support our employees to participate in Aboriginal community cultural events and programs?
14. Do we have an internal Aboriginal employee support group, network or program?
15. Do our leaders personally promote a positive philosophy on Aboriginal relations and is the philosophy's importance reinforced throughout the company?

MOVING FORWARD WITH PAR COMMITTED CRITERIA

1. Review Fees

For the current PAR fee structure, contact CCAB or refer to the website - ccab.com/par-learn-more.

2. Complete PAR Participation Agreement

11

Complete and sign a PAR Participation Agreement (available from CCAB) and submit it to CCAB along with the application fee. The PAR Verifier will invoice the company directly for their Submission Review fee (contact CCAB for Verifier fees/costs, or check the website - ccab.com).

The PAR Participation Agreement covers the terms and conditions for participation in the PAR program.

PAR Participation Agreement

Company agrees:

- To maintain its membership with the CCAB in good standing.
- To comply with all terms and conditions of PAR program participation, including terms and restrictions related to use of the PAR logos (PAR program, Committed, bronze, silver or gold) provided to the company by CCAB, and the use of PAR program documents, presentations and images.
- That participation in the PAR program at the Committed and Certified levels requires an additional annual fee to be paid to CCAB.
- To acknowledge that:
 - PAR Certification requires an independent external verification at the company's cost;
 - The assignment of a Certification level (bronze, silver or gold level) is a decision of an independent PAR Jury;
 - Written notification of a successful certification from CCAB is required prior to any claims of PAR certification or use of a PAR Certified logo.
- That certification at any level is effective upon the date of written notification from CCAB and for a term of three years. The company agrees to undergo verification in its recertification year within one month of the expiry of its PAR Certification, or to cease use of the PAR logos and any claims to PAR program participation.
- That information submitted through the PAR program may be combined with that of other reporting companies for the purpose of identifying trends and aggregate impact of PAR companies.
- To the best of its knowledge, the company is materially compliant with all laws and regulations applicable to its operations, including those related to any formal agreements (e.g., Impact Benefit Agreements) with the Aboriginal community or businesses.

CCAB agrees:

- To maintain as confidential, all information submitted by committed or certifying companies, or shared with CCAB as part of a company's PAR actions or activities, unless otherwise approved by the company, and a secure written agreement to the same by CCAB staff.
- To support the company through the process of achieving Committed or Certified recognition.

- To promote the company's level of participation on the CCAB website and in other communications, as well as promote the program to stakeholder groups.

3. Establish PAR Working Group/Committee

It is recommended that the company establish an internal cross-functional PAR Working Group (for example, people from Human Resources, Procurement etc. - basically those who are involved in Aboriginal employment, business development and community relationships), to give support to the PAR process, advise on relevant information needed and eventually prepare a submission. Medium to large-sized organizations often have an Aboriginal Relations Senior Steering Committee (for example, members of the executive team) who work on strategy, and a PAR Working Group/Committee who focus on planning and implementation of the strategy. PAR Working Group members will need a good understanding of the intent of PAR Certification Criteria. (For added assistance, see "Commentary on PAR Committed Criteria" in this Section, which outlines outcomes a company can expect from implementation of the Criteria.)

4. Conduct Self-Assessment

To evaluate current state and work at highlighting and closing any gaps (and to check on readiness for making a PAR Committed submission), it is recommended the PAR Working Group or Committee should complete an initial internal assessment against the PAR Committed Criteria Phase One level (followed at later stages of implementation by levels two and three). The benefits of completing an assessment are that it gives direction and consensus on what needs to be done, helps improve communications on Aboriginal relations, stimulates a sharing of approaches within the company, reinforces a focus on continuous improvement, and is (if ready to apply) a great tool for helping put together a PAR submission.

Recommended Six-Step Assessment Process

It is recommended that the company apply a process to self-assessment of PAR Criteria. The following six-step approach is one example of an approach that would be helpful:

- 1) Set Up an Assessment Team - Assessment team will consist of maximum four people, from different parts of the company. Their job is to communicate about the assessment, administer the process, and complete a report.
- 2) Spread the Word - The aim is to simplify the assessment and reduce surprises, reinforce that assessment is a learning exercise rather than a "pass/fail" activity, and minimize any potential resistance.
- 3) Pre-Assessment Meeting (Team) - The Assessment Team could complete the assessment discussions amongst themselves. It is suggested, however, that the best outcome will be to include wider input, and this will require the Team to create a plan/agenda for the assessment period, the aim being to put together a few cross-departmental focus group sessions.
- 4) Assessment Period - We recommend focus groups of no more than 90 minutes each, led by members of the Assessment Team and using PAR Certification Phase One Criteria as the basis for questions and discussion (same process to apply each year with implementation of other Phases).
- 5) Post-Assessment Meeting - The Assessment Team collates feedback/input and puts together a report covering the PAR Committed Criteria Phase under review.
- 6) Planning for Further Action - The strength of an assessment is in the comments and feedback of the Assessment Team; the final report reflects their consensus. The Assessment Team should present their findings to company leadership, who should review the comments and draft an Action Plan for moving forward. It is helpful if the Team not only outlines strengths and any opportunities that need to be addressed (and any that need immediate action), but also any striking results and activity that makes the company unique in how it enhances Aboriginal relations, and any positive activity that would make the company even better if it were more widespread.

PAR Assessment Scoring Process

To assist in scoring a submission, a user-friendly scoring process was developed and is available from CCAB. As well as outlining a scoring process, it also includes minimum scoring threshold information for recognition.

5. Prepare Submission

Contact CCAB for current submission deadline dates, or check the website - ccab.com.

Intent to Apply

Following a successful progress review (or another assessment as a base), if the company is ready to make a submission, it should contact CCAB and declare this intention (Intent to Apply notification); a simple phone call or email is all that is needed. See "General Advice/Comments" (below) covering some areas that need special consideration when putting together a submission:

General Advice/Comments

The following advice from PAR Verifiers should assist an applicant with submission development, as they cover some of the problem areas often noted with submissions. Comments cover what PAR Verifiers like to see in these particular areas; the topics listed cover the three Phases of the PAR Committed Criteria.

Community of Interest (in Phase One)

Provide a listing of Aboriginal groups/communities that you were involved with or are currently involved with.

Aboriginal Policy (in Phase One)

It benefits to provide a specific Aboriginal Policy (not just suggesting that the policy is covered, for example, under a Diversity Policy statement or other policies).

Communications Plan (in Phase Two)

Provide an internal and external (notably internal) Communications strategy and plan on Aboriginal relations (and on PAR implementation). This is a critical element and you should provide a solid overview of the strategy/plan (if you have a Plan, make sure to include it as an appendix). A Plan could include scheduled community meetings, calendar of events, common messages on Aboriginal relations (and PAR) to be reinforced, procedures for dealing with media (and media training), and scheduled departmental approaches to the community (to lower possible confusion). In most organizations, applying a positive approach to Aboriginal relations (as reinforced by PAR Criteria) is as much about a culture shift as about process, and ensuring that, for example, a common message is communicated through all levels of the company is an important element in helping sustain a positive focus. The point is that communication needs to be well managed on PAR deployment; doing so will go a long way to ensuring success.

Self-Assessment (in Phases Two and Three)

Organizations that do a comprehensive self-assessment against PAR Criteria to assess its current state, and to help with submission development, tend to achieve positive outcomes. If your PAR Working Committee (or something similar) is completing an assessment, it works well if Committee members complete an assessment and discuss the outcome, then widen the exercise with a few focus groups with staff, Community of Interest representation and Aboriginal suppliers.

Action Plans (in Phases Two and Three)

Provide an Action Plan or Plans for how the company will achieve its employment, business development and community relationships targets, covering such areas as accountability, improvement activity timelines, and other factors. The Action Plan can be free-standing or, for example, within community partner agreements; the point is that for good implementation of required actions to meet goals, a plan must be in place and well communicated. It is helpful to have information on Action Plans in place for all areas within the scope of the submission (not just with projects, for example, but also including corporate, etc.).

Community Relationships (in Phases Two and Three)

There should be information on what the company has done (and is doing) in regards to building trusting relationships with the community. Some critical points will reflect respect for Aboriginal culture and for what is important to the community, such as cultural practices and environmental issues, as well as evidence of the company's active engagement with the community. It is evident that those companies that are viewed as part of the community have a far better chance of success in sustaining good relationships, versus those that go into the community to give an occasional presentation.

Targets (in Phase Three)

Provide annual targets that are realistic (for example, based on data review of past performance) and are measurable. We are not dictating targets to a company, but want to see that the company did establish realistic and current numerical targets that reflect an effort was made in this area, with measures and timelines. If targets are not met, a reasonable explanation is all that is required. It is acknowledged that there could be matters outside the control of the company, or a specific roadblock, that can have a negative impact on results. For clarification, targets for PAR are numerical; all others are classed as objectives.

Tracking (in Phase Three)

Provide a clear outline of the actual processes in place for tracking targets and progress, particularly covering the Employment, Business Development and Community Relationships Drivers. Examples include such processes as key indicators and scheduled reports used to monitor performance, also scheduled sessions for reviewing the data, and the procedures for any follow-up activity.

Employment Data Span (in Phase Three)

Provide the standard total overall employee count (Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal, plus overall retention and workforce composition) plus a breakdown of this data across the company (covering the scope of the submission), for example, a year-end employment report broken out by operating division.

Business Development Data (in Phase Three)

Provide a breakdown of Aboriginal procurement data, a listing of Aboriginal suppliers and amounts spent with each one, versus simply a grand total. In regards to using a database to source Aboriginal suppliers, it is beneficial to expand on the actual use of the database, versus simply stating that a database is in place.

Business Development Information Sessions (in Phase Three)

There should be assurance that if information sessions on procurement are held with the community that they adequately outline the company's procedures and preferences to ensure any roadblocks on access are lowered, and to nurture effective working relationships.

Documentation and Data

The company needs to send an appendix to the submission with required documentation and data, as noted in the Criteria. A Documentation & Targets Checklist (see next page) has been provided covering each of the three phases of the PAR Committed Criteria, to assist an applicant in ensuring that required documentation and data is being provided. (The completed checklist should be attached to the submission.)

SECTION TWO

Completing this Checklist will assist applicants in ensuring that requested documentation is being provided with their submission for each Phase of the PAR Committed Criteria.

PAR Committed - Phase Three Criteria	Yes	No
Provide a copy of:
• Formal Review Report completed to measure results from Phase Two
• Internal Assessment Report against Phase Three Criteria
• Action Plan covering Phase Two Criteria
• A listing of targets covering:
• Aboriginal employment
• Aboriginal employee retention
• Aboriginal workplace composition (across all levels and divisions)
• $ spent on goods and services from Aboriginal-owned businesses
• Increasing community engagement/financial and in-kind support
• Phase Three Action Plan
• Documentation on how the company tracks performance against targets
• Data covering:
• Current number of full-time Aboriginal employees - also show as a percentage of overall employee count (broken out into key functions/operating divisions, across submission scope)
• Current Aboriginal employee retention rate compared to overall employee retention levels (broken out into key functions/operating divisions, across submission scope)
• Current Aboriginal employee workforce composition across the company, compared to overall employee numbers (broken out into key functions/operating divisions, across submission scope)
• $ spent on goods and services with Aboriginal-owned businesses and as a percentage of the total procurement budget (listing of Aboriginal suppliers and amounts spent with each one)
• $ spent on financial and/or in-kind support provided by the company for community activities and events
• Data showing levels of community engagement
• Breakdown of dates and participants that have gone through employee Aboriginal cultural awareness training, also content breakdown
• Dates of community procurement information sessions to assist potential Aboriginal suppliers/contractors dealing with or bidding to the company

6. Select PAR Verifier

The role of a qualified PAR Verifier is to thoroughly review a PAR Committed Criteria submission and complete a high-level report (noting key strengths of the submission, some suggestions if applicable, and an executive summary) that is sent to the applicant by CCAB, which advises them of the outcome. In regards to confidentiality, all PAR Verifiers are qualified professionals and sign a Confidentiality and Non-Disclosure Agreement that covers:

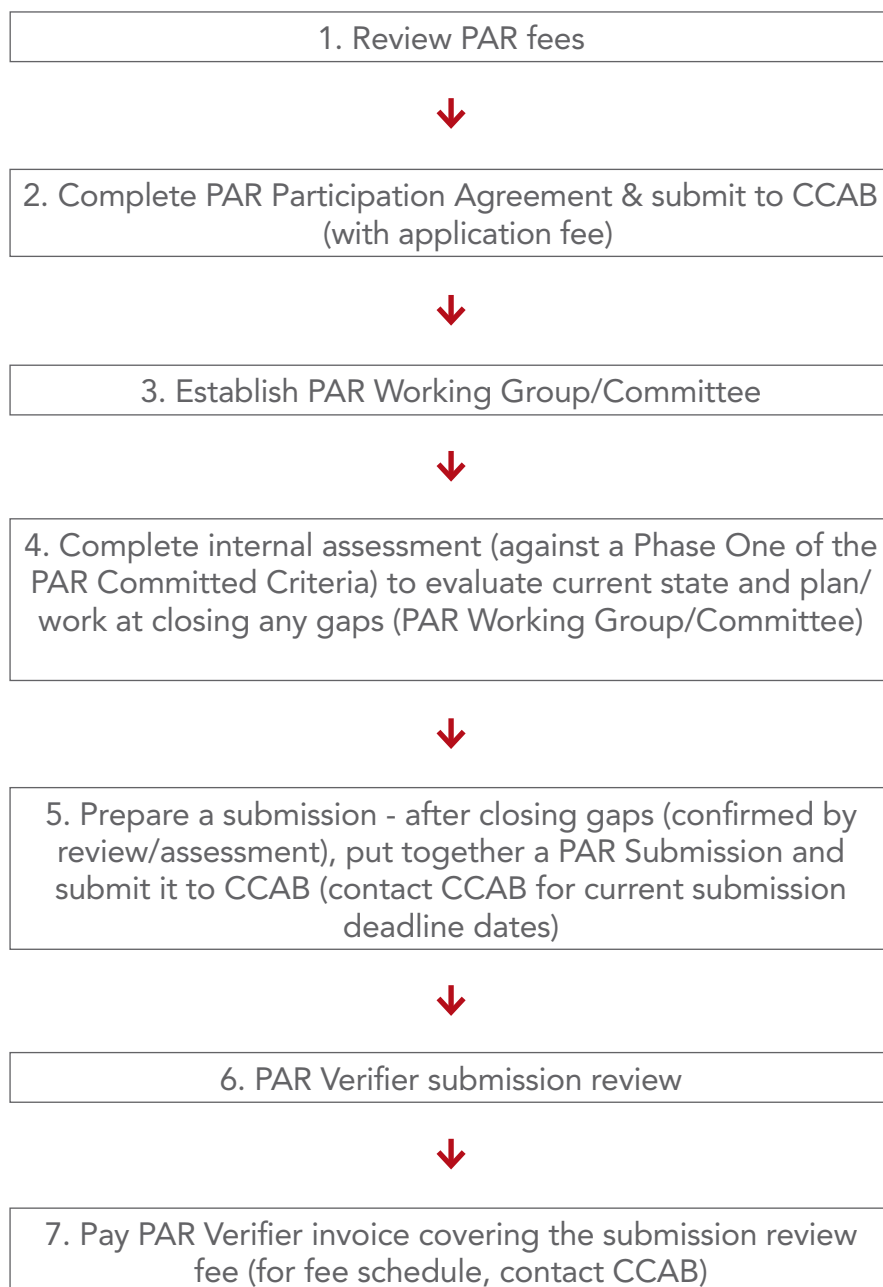

PAR Verifier Confidentiality and Non-Disclosure Agreement

- A) Definition of Confidential Information - Confidential information is defined as all information relating to the project, including any facts, data, ideas, processes and plans. It also includes all information relating to CCAB member companies and PAR reporting companies. In addition, all verbal information is considered confidential information at the time of disclosure. It also includes any information the PAR Verifier obtains through analysis or examinations of the project.
- B) Disclosure of Confidential Information - The information disclosed by CCAB may be used by the PAR Verifier only for the purpose of working on the project. The PAR Verifier is not to use the disclosed information for the PAR Verifier's benefit or any other purpose. The PAR Verifier agrees not to disclose any confidential information that has been made known to them.
- C) Acknowledgement - The PAR Verifier acknowledges that the information which will be made available is entrusted for the sole purpose of furthering the interests of CCAB and will not be used for any other purpose.

7. Pay Verifier Fees/Costs

The company pays the PAR Verifier directly. The PAR Verifier will invoice the company for the submission review fee (for fee schedule, contact CCAB or refer to the website - ccab.com).

QUICK REFERENCE DIAGRAM - SEVEN-STEP PAR COMMITTED CRITERIA SUBMISSION PROCESS

This commentary will help you appreciate the intent of the PAR Committed Criteria, and the outcomes a company can expect from using the Criteria as a road map for building a solid foundation for achieving positive Aboriginal relations. The PAR Committed Criteria is comprehensive but user friendly, with three specific/ separate progressive Phases to assist companies just starting out in PAR in building a solid foundation for positive Aboriginal relations, leading toward the application in the future of the PAR Certification Criteria and Certification. Each Phase of the PAR Committed Criteria should take no longer than one year to implement (all phases should be completed within three years).

What is the Outcome from Phase One?

The outcome from meeting the intent of Phase One of the PAR Committed Criteria is that the company will have clearly identified its Community of Interest (key Aboriginal communities/groups); and its leadership and senior line management team are committed to leading the charge on positive Aboriginal relations, reinforced by a strong policy and a PAR Working Group/Committee operating structure, to help drive policy and strategy forward across the company.

What is the Outcome from Phase Two?

The outcome from meeting the intent of Phase Two of the PAR Committed Criteria is that the company has successfully completed a Phase Two assessment of current state (to assist planning), an effective communications strategy and plan have been introduced to manage internal/external communications on Aboriginal relations (and progress on PAR), and the management team are reinforcing the commitment to Aboriginal relations in a consistent manner across all levels of the company. Also, Aboriginal community input has assisted the development of a PAR Action Plan, and development is under way to introduce top-class employee Aboriginal cultural awareness training in all areas.

What is the Outcome from Phase Three? Where Should a Company Expect to Be At?

- The outcome from meeting the intent of Phase Three of the PAR Committed Criteria is that the company has successfully completed a Phase Three assessment of current state (to assist planning), building on the good foundation work from Phase Two.
- Targets have been set on Aboriginal employment, retention and workplace composition, spending on goods and services provided by Aboriginal-owned businesses, and on Aboriginal community engagement and support.
- Targeting enabled the implementation of a Phase Three Action Plan that identified actions, responsibilities, performance indicators and timelines on implementation, complemented by a tracking and review methodology to review progress.
- Capacity-building training programs for Aboriginal employees are evolving well, and a productive focus is in place on training and education, mentoring programs, internships and support for scholarships.
- Company leaders are actively engaged with the Aboriginal community, driven by a proactive focus on building foundational relationships based on trust and reciprocity, and reinforced through active employee participation in cultural events, programs and celebrations.
- There is good feedback from employees in regards to the rollout of Aboriginal cultural awareness training (developed earlier in Phase Two), complemented with the establishment of an internal Aboriginal employee support network.

- A process-driven approach has been implemented on Aboriginal business development, with the application of a supplier database (to assist sourcing), along with clear procurement processes and good access to company business for Aboriginal companies.
- The company can provide current data covering the number of full-time Aboriginal employees (also show as a percentage of overall employee count), retention rate compared to overall employee retention levels, workforce composition across the company (compared to overall employee numbers), amount spent on goods and services with Aboriginal-owned businesses (and as a percentage of the total procurement budget), dollar amount of financial and/or in-kind support provided by the company for community activities and events, and data showing levels of community engagement.

MOVING FORWARD WITH PAR CERTIFICATION CRITERIA

1. Review Fees

For the current PAR fee structure, contact CCAB or refer to the website - ccab.com.

2. Complete PAR Participation Agreement

Complete and sign a PAR Participation Agreement (available from CCAB) and submit it to CCAB (along with the application fee). The PAR Verifier will invoice the company directly for their Submission Review fee (contact CCAB for Verifier fees/costs, or check the website - ccab.com).

The PAR Participation Agreement covers the terms and conditions for participation in the PAR program:

PAR Participation Agreement

Company agrees:

- To maintain its membership with the CCAB in good standing.
- To comply with all terms and conditions of PAR program participation, including terms and restrictions related to use of the PAR logos (PAR program, Committed, bronze, silver or gold) provided to the company by CCAB, and the use of PAR program documents, presentations and images.
- That participation in the PAR program at the Committed and Certified levels requires an additional annual fee to be paid to CCAB.
- To acknowledge that:
 - PAR certification requires an independent external verification at the company's cost;
 - The assignment of a certification level (bronze, silver or gold level) is a decision of an independent PAR Jury;
 - Written notification of a successful certification from CCAB is required prior to any claims of PAR certification or use of a PAR Certified logo.
- That certification at any level is effective upon the date of written notification from CCAB and for a term of three years. The company agrees to undergo verification in its recertification year within one month of the expiry of its PAR certification, or to cease use of the PAR logos and any claims to PAR program participation.
- That information submitted through the PAR program may be combined with that of other reporting companies for the purpose of identifying trends and aggregate impact of PAR companies.
- To the best of its knowledge, the company is materially compliant with all laws and regulations applicable to its operations, including those related to any formal agreements (e.g., Impact Benefit Agreements) with the Aboriginal community or businesses.

CCAB agrees:

- To maintain as confidential, all information submitted by Committed or Certifying companies, or shared with CCAB as part of a company's PAR actions or activities, unless otherwise approved by the company, and to secure a written agreement to this effect signed by CCAB staff.
- To support the company through the process of achieving Committed or Certified recognition.

- To promote the company's level of participation on the CCAB website and in other communications, as well as promote the program to stakeholder groups.

3. Establish PAR Working Group/Committee

We recommend that the company establish an internal cross-functional PAR Working Group (for example, people from Human Resources, Procurement, etc. - basically those who are involved in Aboriginal employment, business development and community relationship matters), to give support to the PAR process, advise on relevant information needed and eventually prepare a submission. Medium to large-sized organizations often have an Aboriginal Relations Senior Steering Committee (for example, members of the executive team) that works on strategy, and a PAR Working Group/Committee that focuses on planning and implementation of the strategy. PAR Working Group members will need a good understanding of the intent of the PAR Certification Criteria (review actual Criteria plus, for added assistance, see "Commentary on PAR Certification Criteria" in this Section, which outlines outcomes a company can expect from implementation of the Criteria).

4. Conduct Self-Assessment

To evaluate current state and work at highlighting and closing any gaps (and to check on readiness for making a PAR submission), it is highly recommended the PAR Working Group or Committee should lead/complete an internal assessment against the PAR Certification Criteria. The benefit of completing an assessment is that it gives direction and consensus on what needs to be done, helps improve communications on Aboriginal relations, stimulates a sharing of approaches within the company, reinforces a focus on continuous improvement, and is (if ready to apply) a great tool for helping put together a PAR submission.

Recommended Six-Step Assessment Process

It is recommended that the company apply a process to self-assessment of PAR Criteria. The following six-step approach is one example of an approach that would be helpful:

- 1) Set Up an Assessment Team - Assessment team will consist of maximum four people, from different parts of the company. Their job is to communicate about the assessment, administer the process and complete a report.
- 2) Spread the Word - The aim is to demystify the assessment and reduce surprises, reinforce that assessment is a learning exercise rather than a "pass/fail" activity, and minimize any potential resistance.
- 3) Pre-Assessment Meeting (Team) - The Assessment Team could complete the assessment discussions amongst themselves. We highly recommend, however, that the best outcome will be to include wider input, and this will require the Team to create a plan/agenda for the assessment period, the aim being to put together a few cross-departmental focus group sessions.
- 4) Assessment Period - We recommend focus groups of no more than 90 minutes each, led by members of the Assessment Team and using PAR Certification Criteria as the basis for questions (prepared) and discussion.
- 5) Post-Assessment Meeting - The Assessment Team collates feedback/input and puts together a report covering the PAR Certification Criteria.
- 6) Planning for Further Action - The strength of an assessment is in the comments and feedback of the Assessment Team; the final report reflects their consensus. The Assessment Team should present their findings to company leadership, who should review the comments and draft an Action Plan for moving forward. It is helpful if the Team not only outlines strengths and any opportunities that need to be addressed (and any that need immediate action), but also any striking results and activity that makes the company unique in how it enhances Aboriginal relations, and any positive activity that would make the company even better if it were more widespread.

PAR Assessment Scoring Process

To assist in scoring a submission, a user-friendly scoring process was developed and is available from CCAB. As well as outlining a scoring process, it also includes minimum scoring threshold information for recognition.

5. Prepare Submission

Contact CCAB for current submission deadline dates, or check the website - ccab.com.

Following a successful progress review (or another assessment as a base), if the company believes it is ready to make a submission for PAR Certification Bronze, Silver or Gold, it should then contact CCAB and declare this intention (Intent to Apply notification); a simple phone call or email is all that is needed.

Certification Levels

The following outline/comments covers the three levels of PAR Certification (Bronze, Silver and Gold) and may assist dialogue on the Criteria. Also see the "General Advice/Comments" section below, which covers some areas that may need special consideration.

Bronze/Silver/Gold Certification Levels - PAR Certification Criteria

There are three levels of PAR certification: Bronze, Silver and Gold. If a company is considering making a submission for a level of certification (based on current state and maturity on Aboriginal relations), it is helpful to appreciate the key intent of each level, and consider which level is currently being met. To assist discussion, the following outlines the key activities that PAR Verifiers expect to see implemented and covered in a submission. A good tool to assist evaluation is to complete an internal self-assessment against the Criteria.

Bronze Certification - Focus on Commitment and Action Plans

Leadership Actions

- The company has an Aboriginal Relations Policy, and Aboriginal relations are integrated into business planning.
- Board member/s are involved in Aboriginal relations.
- Leadership and line managers have received Aboriginal cultural awareness training and PAR Criteria training.

Employment

- Community input on employment issues.

- Targets set on Aboriginal employment, retention and workforce composition.
- Action Plan in place to meet targets (responsibilities, actions, timelines, and methods to track performance).

Business Development

- Community input on business development.
- Targets set on Aboriginal business development, notably growth of services and goods from Aboriginal suppliers.
- Action Plan in place to meet targets (responsibilities, actions, timelines, and methods to track performance).

Community Relationships

- Community input on community relationships.
- Targets set on community engagement and funding.
- Action Plan in place to meet targets (responsibilities, actions, timelines, and methods to track performance).

Silver Certification - Focus on Implementation and Results

In addition to meeting Criteria intent at the Bronze Level:

Leadership Actions

- PAR self-assessment completed and fully reviewed.
- A Communications Plan for Aboriginal relations.
- Management cascade philosophy and commitment to Aboriginal relations.
- Process for selection of priorities.
- Operating committee structure for PAR implementation (for example, PAR Committee).
- Leaders review effectiveness of Aboriginal relations strategy.
- Community and stakeholder support for the company's efforts on all four PAR Drivers.

Employment

- Tracking employment, retention, workforce composition and training.
- Employee Aboriginal cultural awareness training sessions held.
- Aboriginal employee support group in place.
- Support for scholarships, mentoring, internships and training.
- Achieved positive results and trends in employment, retention and workplace composition, for the full submission reporting period (past three years), with data evidence.

Business Development

- Tracking Aboriginal procurement.
- Access (and procedures) for Aboriginal suppliers.

- Procurement information sessions held.
- The company supports training and education initiatives.
- Joint ventures, partnerships or other forms of business arrangements have been established with communities.
- The company has achieved positive results and trends in Aboriginal business development, for the full submission reporting period (past three years), with data evidence.

Community Relationships

- Tracking community engagement and funding.
- Leaders and employees are engaged/participate with communities.
- National Aboriginal Day is celebrated.
- Support and activity for knowledge transfer.
- Activities and successes are well communicated.
- The company supports Aboriginal cultural activities and sponsorships.
- The company has achieved positive results and trends in community engagement and funding for the full submission reporting period (past three years), with data evidence.

Gold Certification - Role Model and Sustained Outcomes

In addition to meeting Criteria intent at the Bronze and Silver Levels:

- High levels of appreciation within the company of the significance of positive Aboriginal relations to the organization.
- Aboriginal relations policies, strategy and PAR Criteria intent fully ingrained within the company, at all levels.
- A role model company for positive Aboriginal relations (an example to others), with a continuous improvement philosophy, and good results and trends across PAR Drivers (with data evidence).
- Excellence in PAR Drivers, mature processes and innovative enhancements over a number of years, across all departments (within submission scope).
- Exceptional support for the company from Aboriginal communities/groups/stakeholders.

General Advice/Comments

The following advice from PAR Verifiers should assist an applicant with submission development as they cover some areas that need special consideration and, if absent, cause issues with a submission.

Community of Interest

Provide a listing of Aboriginal groups/communities that you were involved with during the three-year reporting period (not simply stating "involvement" with First Nations, for example).

Aboriginal Policy

It benefits to provide a specific Aboriginal Policy (not just suggesting that the policy is covered, for example, under a Diversity Policy statement or other policies).

27

Communications Plan

Provide an internal and external (notably internal) Communications strategy and plan on Aboriginal relations (and on PAR implementation). This is a critical element and you should provide a solid overview of the strategy/plan (If you have a Plan, make sure to include it as an appendix). A Plan could include scheduled community meetings, calendar of events, common messages on Aboriginal relations (and PAR) to be reinforced, procedures for dealing with media (and media training), and scheduled departmental approaches to the community (to lower possible confusion). In most organizations applying, a positive approach on Aboriginal relations (as reinforced by PAR Criteria) is as much about a culture shift as about process, and ensuring that, for example, a common message is communicated through all levels of the company is an important element in helping sustain a positive focus. The point is that communication needs to be well managed on PAR deployment; doing so will go a long way to ensuring success.

Self-Assessment (against PAR Certification Criteria)

Organizations that do a comprehensive self-assessment against PAR Criteria to assess current state, and to help with submission development, are more successful. If your PAR Working Committee (or something similar) is completing an assessment, our advice is that it works well if Committee members complete an assessment and discuss the outcome, then widen the exercise with a few focus groups with staff, Community of Interest representation and Aboriginal suppliers.

Targets

Provide annual targets that are realistic (for example, based on data review of past performance) and measurable. We are not dictating targets to a company, but we do wish to see that the company did establish realistic and current numerical targets that reflect an effort was made in this area, with measures and timelines. If targets are not met, a reasonable explanation is all that is required. We realize that there could be matters outside the control of the company, or a specific roadblock, that can have a negative impact on results. For clarification, targets for PAR are numerical; all others are classed as objectives.

Action Plans

Provide an Action Plan or Plans for how the company will achieve its employment, business development and community relationships targets, covering such areas as accountability, improvement activity timelines, and other factors. The Action Plan can be free-standing or, for example, within community partner agreements; the point is that for good implementation of required actions to meet goals, a Plan must be in place and well communicated. It will be helpful to have information on Action Plans in place for all areas within the scope of the submission (not just with projects, for example, but also including corporate, etc.).

Tracking

Provide a clear outline of the actual processes in place for tracking targets and progress, particularly covering the Employment, Business Development and Community Relationships Drivers. Examples include such processes as key indicators and scheduled reports used to monitor performance, also scheduled sessions for reviewing the data, and the procedures for any follow-up activity.

Employment Data Span

Provide the standard total overall employee count (Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal, plus overall retention and workforce composition) plus a breakdown of this data across the company (across the scope of the submission), for example, a year-end employment report broken out by operating division.

Business Development Data

Provide a breakdown of Aboriginal procurement data, a listing of Aboriginal suppliers and amounts spent with each one, versus simply a grand total. In regards to using a database to source Aboriginal suppliers, it is beneficial to expand on the actual use of the database, versus simply stating that a database is in place.

Business Development Information Sessions

There should be assurance that if information sessions on procurement are held with the community that they adequately outline the company's procedures and preferences to ensure any roadblocks on access are lowered, and to nurture effective working relationships.

Community Relationships

There should be information on what the company has done (and is doing) in regards to building trusting relationships with the community. Some critical points are how you show respect for Aboriginal culture and for what's important to the community, such as cultural practices and environmental issues, as well as evidence of the company's active engagement with the community (not simply involved with an annual tournament, for example). It is clear that those companies that are viewed as part of the community have a far better chance of success in sustaining good relationships, versus those that go into the community to give an occasional presentation.

Results

Check the Results & Trend Data Chart below for a listing of expected outcomes; key data required covers results for three years, broken out per year for Aboriginal employment, retention and workforce composition (broken out into key functions/operating divisions, across submission scope), and Aboriginal business development (listing of Aboriginal suppliers and amounts spent with each one).

Documentation and Data

The company needs to send an appendix to the submission with required documentation and data, as noted in the Criteria. One checklist and one chart have been provided to assist an applicant in ensuring that required documentation and data is being provided (a Documentation & Targets Checklist and a separate Results & Trend Data Chart; see both below). The completed checklist and chart should be attached to the submission, and will help progress the submission through the adjudication process in a timely manner.

29

The applicant needs to provide supportive documentation and data in an appendix to their submission (as noted in the Criteria). Completing this Checklist will assist applicants in ensuring that requested documentation is being provided with their PAR Certification submission, and will also help to progress the submission through the adjudication process in a timely manner.

SECTION THREE

PAR CERTIFICATION CRITERIA - DOCUMENTATION & TARGETS CHECKLIST

Applicants need to provide results and trend data in an appendix to their PAR Certification submission (as noted in the Criteria). Completing this Checklist will assist applicants in ensuring that requested results and trend data is being provided, and also helps to progress the submission through the adjudication process in a timely manner.

6. Select PAR Verifier

The company will receive information from CCAB about options for selecting a regional PAR Verifier and will confirm selection. The role of a qualified PAR Verifier is to thoroughly review a PAR submission, arrange with the company for a site visit to gain a better appreciation of selected elements of the submission, and submit a high-level report to the PAR Jury to assist their deliberations (noting key strengths of the submission, some suggestions if applicable, and an executive summary). Following the Jury meeting, CCAB will advise the company of the outcome, as well as send a copy of the Verifier Report. In regards to confidentiality, all PAR Verifiers are qualified professionals and sign a Confidentiality and Non-Disclosure Agreement that covers:

PAR Verifier Confidentiality and Non-Disclosure Agreement

- A) Definition of Confidential Information - Confidential information is defined as all information relating to the project, including any facts, data, ideas, processes and plans. It also includes all information relating to CCAB member companies and PAR reporting companies. In addition, all verbal information is considered confidential information at the time of disclosure. It also includes any information the PAR Verifier obtains through analysis or examinations of the project.
- B) Disclosure of Confidential Information - The information disclosed by CCAB may be used by the PAR Verifier only for the purpose of working on the project. The PAR Verifier is not to use the disclosed information for the PAR Verifier's benefit or any other purpose. The PAR Verifier agrees not to disclose any confidential information that has been made known to them.
- C) Acknowledgement - The PAR Verifier acknowledges that the information which will be made available is entrusted for the sole purpose of furthering the interests of CCAB and will not be used for any other purpose.

7. Undergo Site Visit Exercise

Site visits are designed for completion in one day for most companies, or less for smaller companies. Visits are generally held at head offices, though they may take place where a company has operations. The aim of a site visit is to verify selected points from the submission, noted earlier by the PAR Verifier during their submission review. The company must assign an individual to liaise with the PAR Verifier, and develop and provide a draft agenda in consultation with the PAR Verifier, provide an organization chart, and arrange for office space for the PAR Verifier while on-site, as well as any additional information requested in advance by the PAR Verifier.

Example of a Site Visit Agenda

- | | |
|--------------------|---|
| 8:45 am - 9:00 am | Verifier arrival/greeting - office set up - receive any additional documentation. |
| 9:00 am - 9:45 am | Meeting with President and representation from Executive leadership/Steering Committee (provide names and positions). Advise room location. |
| 9:45 am - 12:45 pm | Meeting with internal PAR Working Group/Committee (provide names and positions). Advise room location. |
| 1:00 pm - 2:15 pm | Meeting with Aboriginal employee focus group (representation from Employee Network if possible). Lunch provided for all. Advise room location. |
| 2:30 pm - 3:45 pm | Interviews with four to five selected external community stakeholders. Each call lasts 15 to 20 minutes. Stakeholders should represent those involved with the company on business development and community engagement and funding. The PAR Verifier requires the names, contact information and connection with the company (e.g., Aboriginal community, supplier, etc.). |
| 3:45 pm - 4:00 pm | Wrap up/Close out meeting (brief). Advise room location. |

Site Visit Meetings

The exercise is for the PAR Verifier to meet with four groups (all scheduled); the four meetings are outlined below.

34

A. Meeting with the Senior team (normally 45 minutes)

The objective of a meeting with the most senior leader or the leadership team of the company is to better understand the company's commitment and the relationship between PAR and the company's strategy.

B. Meeting with members of PAR Working Group/Committee (normally 3 hours)

The PAR Verifier will meet with the group/team noted in the PAR submission as having responsibility for implementation of PAR Criteria Drivers across the company (employment, business development, leadership actions and community relationships); this may also include a senior executive with accountability for Aboriginal relations. The objective of the meeting is to verify (and clarify) key parts of the submission and to address any issues noted from submission review.

C. Meeting with Aboriginal employees (normally 75 minutes)

The verification exercise requires an informal meeting with a focus group of Aboriginal employees, preferably people who have worked for the company for more than one year (if timing works, this meeting could take place over lunch). The purpose of the meeting is to gain their perspective on certain relevant items within the submission. Members of the leadership team and the PAR Working Group/Committee, and any Aboriginal person who is in leadership or on the PAR Committee, are not to attend this meeting.

D. Meeting/discussions with external stakeholders (75 minutes - normally 15- to 20-minute phone calls for each)

The company submits a list of potential community/partner interviewees to the PAR Verifier in advance of the site visit. From this list, the PAR Verifier (in conjunction with the applicant) selects four to five stakeholders for an interview. The company will schedule these interviews (15- to 20-minute phone calls or in-person interviews) to be held while on-site (normally in the afternoon of a visit). The objective is to gain further insight in regards to the company's engagement with the community, and the company's commitment to positive Aboriginal relations, working from a set of relevant questions.

8. Pay Verifier Fees/Costs

The company pays the PAR Verifier directly. The PAR Verifier will invoice the company for the fee, travel costs and any related site visit expenses. Contact CCAB for further details.

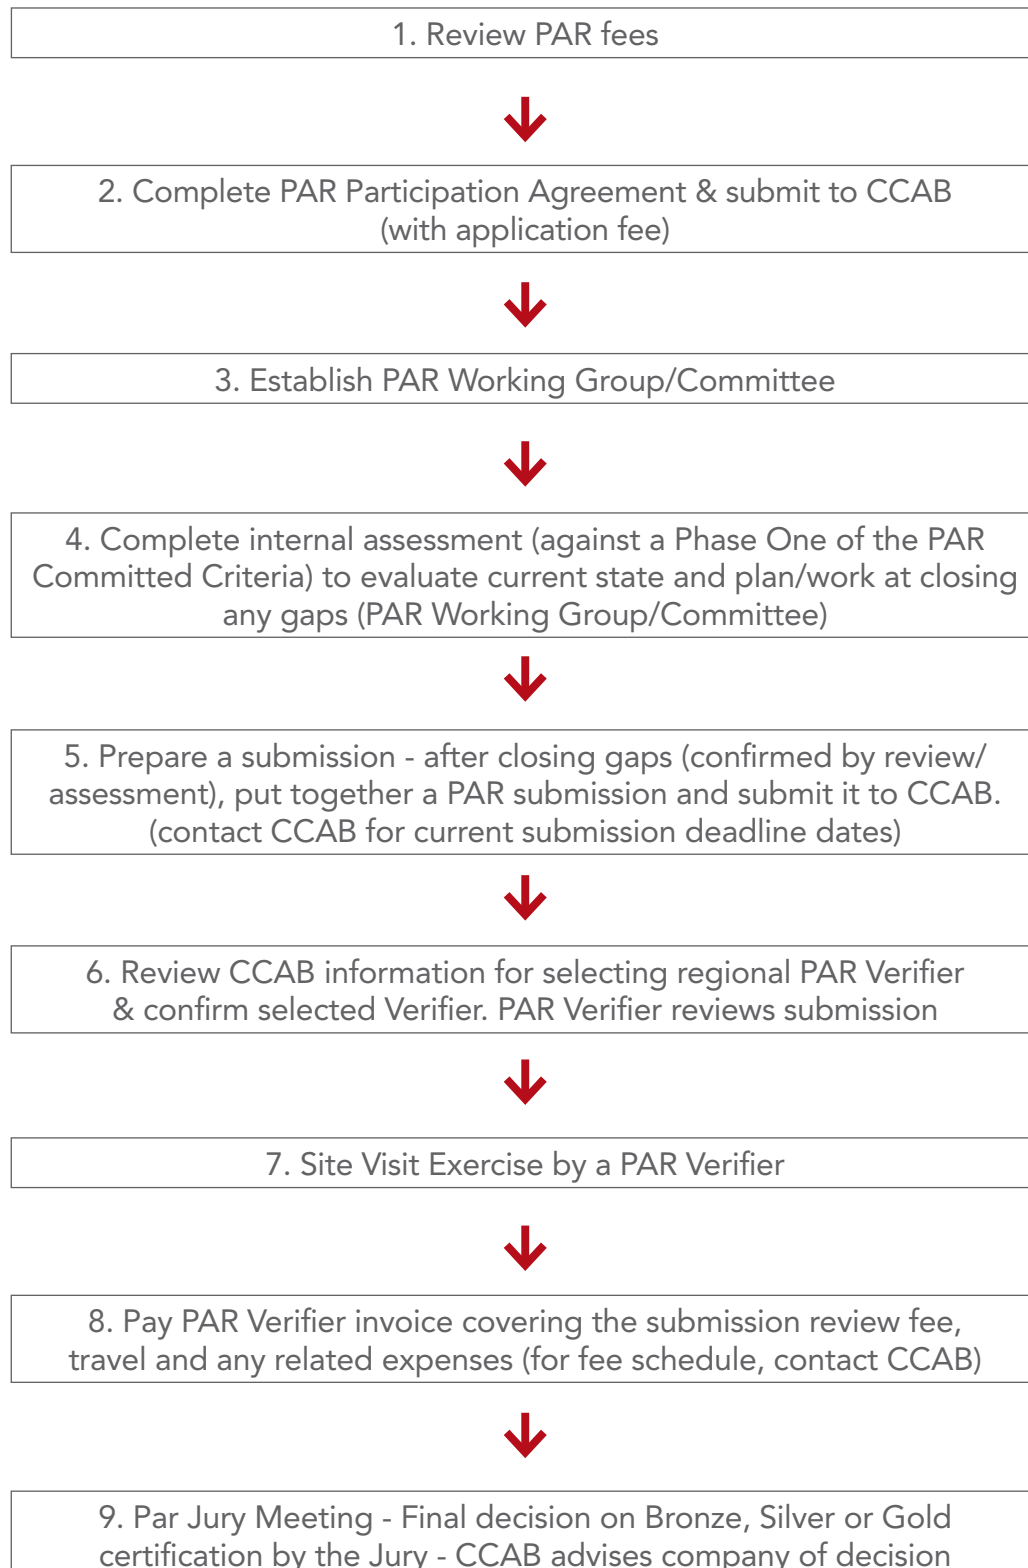

9. Meet with PAR Jury

At the final stage of the PAR Certification process, the PAR Verifier acts as an advocate for the applicant, providing the PAR Jury with a final report, including a summary of findings. Jury members are held in high regard within the Aboriginal business community; they meet to review and ensure that the PAR adjudication system was comprehensive, effective and consistently applied, and to review submissions and Verifier reports and discuss matters directly with PAR Verifiers. This level of review and input assists their deliberations in reaching consensus on awarding certification to applicants. The final decision regarding PAR Certification Levels (Bronze, Silver or Gold) is advised by CCAB. CCAB will notify the company by telephone and email.

COMMENTARY ON PAR CERTIFICATION CRITERIA

This commentary will help you appreciate the scope and intent of the PAR Certification Criteria, and also the outcome a company can expect from using the Criteria as its road map for achieving and sustaining positive Aboriginal relations. The PAR Certification Criteria was designed for organizations at the Third Phase PAR Committed Criteria implementation level or above, to help grow and sustain their focus on positive Aboriginal relations. The PAR Certification Criteria is made up of four comprehensive sections covering Leadership Actions, Employment, Business Development and Community Relationships (referred to as PAR Drivers).

What is the Outcome from the PAR Leadership Actions Driver?

Leadership Actions are defined as actions to reinforce an organizational focus on Aboriginal relations by leaders of the organization. Such actions have an impact in achieving and sustaining good results in all PAR Drivers. These actions include setting and cascading a clear commitment and policy, identification and communication of the Community of Interest, scheduling self-assessment exercises against PAR Criteria to review status, and the application of a structure to drive and help sustain the commitment to positive Aboriginal relations across the organization. The outcome from meeting the intent of the PAR Certification Leadership Actions Driver is that the company has clearly identified its Aboriginal Community of Interest, that Aboriginal relations are integrated into strategic plans and leadership, and that management is cascading and reinforcing positive Aboriginal relations across all levels in a consistent manner. Commitment to Aboriginal relations is driven through policy, assessment practices, key improvement priorities and the workings of formal internal cross-functional PAR Working Groups/Committees who lead the charge on implementation and continuous improvement.

What is the Outcome from the PAR Employment Driver?

Employment is defined as the commitment of resources (time and money) to achieving equitable representation of Aboriginal persons in the workplace. This involves recruiting and retaining Aboriginal talent, supporting their career development and advancement, and promoting mobility of Aboriginal employees throughout employment sectors and levels. This Driver also includes supporting cross-cultural awareness and/or cultural sensitivity training, and providing training and support for existing or prospective Aboriginal employees through specific programs or actions. The outcome from meeting the intent of the PAR Certification Employment Driver is that the company has injected Aboriginal community/stakeholder input into planning on three key elements (Aboriginal recruitment, retention and workforce composition), targets have been established, an Action Plan has been implemented, and the company tracks performance and progress on a scheduled basis. Leading-edge processes have been successfully implemented on the elements, plus an Aboriginal employee support network/group has been implemented and is being well used. Employee satisfaction has been enhanced with a renewed focus on training, capacity building, and support being provided through internships, apprenticeships and scholarships. Data shows that the company has met employment targets and there are encouraging year-over-year successful trends over the past three years.

What is the Outcome from the PAR Business Development Driver?

Business development is defined as the commitment of resources (time and money) to the development of business relationships with Aboriginal-owned businesses. These activities are sustained through mutual benefit. Capacity building and mentorship also directly relate to sustaining and enhancing business development. The outcome from meeting the intent of the PAR Certification Business Development Driver is that the company has ongoing constructive input from the Aboriginal community to assist targets, an Action Plan has been deployed, and a tracking process is used to monitor targets and progress. The company has leading-edge processes in place (for example, preferential policies/practices for Aboriginal suppliers, a comprehensive database to assist sourcing suppliers and contractors, and well-understood procurement procedures applied across the organization). The company is mentoring and supporting Aboriginal business people in innovative ways, and schedules/holds procurement information sessions in communities. Data shows that the company has met its targets on purchases and contracting with Aboriginal businesses, and there are encouraging year-over-year positive trends over the past three years.

What is the Outcome from the PAR Community Relationships Driver?

The Community Relationships Driver is broken out into two components: engagement and support. Engagement is defined as providing time and resources to develop and sustain positive and progressive relationships with Aboriginal communities, groups and stakeholders. Engagement can include communications, information sharing, involvement in events and activities, and partnerships. Support is defined as a commitment to develop positive and progressive relationships with the Aboriginal communities, groups and stakeholders by providing financial and/or in-kind support. These components work together to nurture and sustain positive and progressive relationships. The outcome from meeting the intent of the Community Relationships Driver is that the company has ongoing constructive Aboriginal community/stakeholder input to assist Community Relationships planning and annual targets, an Action Plan has been deployed, and a tracking process is used to monitor performance and progress. Management is well engaged with community leadership, and employees are participating in Aboriginal cultural and community local and national events and celebrations. The company is giving financial and in-kind support for cultural initiatives, with positive feedback on impacts by the community. Data shows that the company has met its community engagement targets and is making positive impacts with its support for cultural programs/events, and there are encouraging year-over-year successful trends over the past three years.
