

Denise Pothier

Vice President of Practice Services and Vice President of Indigenous Relations

Denise Pothier has a background in chemical engineering and more than twenty-five years of industry experience. She is currently the Vice President of Practice Services and the first-ever Vice President of Indigenous Relations at Stantec. She sits on the board of directors for Techsploration; the Canadian Council for Aboriginal Business (CCAB); Center for Ocean Ventures and Entrepreneurship (COVE); and the Nova Scotia Community College (NSCC) Foundation. She serves on Engineers Canada's Equitable Participation committee and is the current chair for the Indigenous Peoples participation in engineering committee.

She is a recipient of 2016 the Canadian Progress Club Halifax Women of Excellence Award for Management and the Professions; was named as one of the 2018 Canada's Inspiring Fifty women in STEM; and named one of 2018 Canada's Most Powerful Women: Top 100 Award Winners.

She is a firm believer that a diverse and representative employee base, led by a diverse and representative leadership team, enhances and strengthens the cultures of quality, innovation, and health and safety within an organization.
